

My name is Emma, and I'm an ST2 Histopathology Trainee currently based at the Royal Bolton Hospital. I became interested in pathology during my fourth year at medical school, and was fortunate enough to explore the specialty through various projects and my elective placement. I graduated from the University of Manchester in 2019, and started Histopathology training after completing my two Foundation Years. I particularly enjoy gynae pathology and post-mortems (something I never thought I'd say at the start of training!). Outside of work, I enjoy running and you will often find me at a local Parkrun on a Saturday morning!
